A handful of bechnuts is shown us by Mr. Thomas Brown of San Fernando Road. The first he has seen for over sixty years, or the first we have seen in about the same time—when we left our homes beyond the Mississippi for the far West. They were brought to town by Mrs. Frank Jones.

The demand for good pastry and bread in Tropico and vicinity is so great and pressing, that Mr. Ashton, Glendale avenue, has decided to build an up-to-date Sanitary Bake Shop here with which to supply the people with the purest and choicest production of the "staff of life"

A note from Rev. M. M. Eshelman has this to say: "Expect to be at home the 29th inst. Have had a fine outing at Ashland, Oregon. Snow and rain were energizers for me. Ashland was over worked industrially last year and is now somewhat stagnant or less active. However a good place to live."

The bids of Peter L. Ferry of Tropico, which secured to him the contract for the street work of Glendale Avenue are as follows:

Macadamizing, per sq. foot, 6½ cents. Grading per linear foot, 50 cents. Cement curb, per linear foot, 22 cts. Cement Side walk per sq. foot 8 cts.

A suit to recover for putting in a lawn by C. H. Henry, against Myron W. Tilden of Park Avenue, was heard before Recorder Shuey, on Saturday last. Dwight Stephenson, attorney for plaintiff. Defendant appeared as his own attorney. From the testimony of himself and wife the lawn was not to be paid for until it was certain that he had a lawn, and that when the suit was brought there was no certainty of his having a lawn.

Witnesses for the plaintiff, that the lawns of grass was unusual. ly good. But to be made certain about it the court announced that he would go and look at it himself and would announce his decision Monday. Accordingly, after satisfying himself that the lawn was not only there now, and must have been when the suit was brought, gave judgement for amount due, $22.50 and costs of suit.

BUSINESS BLOCKS ON BRAND BOULEVARD

The impossibility of excluding buildings from points of convenient access for business purposes on Brand boulevard, either in Glendale or Tropico by means of building restrictions, is becoming more and more apparent as time passes and the cities grow. Just now a few residents of the neighborhood of the boulevard and Lomita avenue, which has been regarded as a strictly residential district, are mildly agitated over the proposed erection of a three-story business block on the southwest corner of those streets, by J. B. Cohn of 100 Orange street, Glendale, formerly of San Francisco. The house, belonging to Wilbur McFadden, that has been on the lot for a year has been removed to Seventh street, between Brand and Central. The lot was purchased by Mr. Cohn for $2750, and can be worth that sum for no other than business purposes. A much more desirable lot for residence purposes can be purchased elsewhere for less money.

But this is not the only point on the boulevard, either in Glendale or Tropico, that enterprising business men have their eyes upon for business sites. Nothing conclusive may develop before the opening and widening of the street, though it is possible. It is by no means improbable that Tropico's present business section on at San Fernando Road, Laurel street, clude the crossing of Brand Boulevard at Sa Fernando Road, Laurel street, Cypress street and Park avenue. Stranger things than these have happened.

The signs are ominous of trouble ahead.

With every passing day the rich grow richer and the poor poorer.

That the Gould system is coming to Los Angeles in the near future is now an admitted fact.

GUM DISEASE—IT'S CAUSE AND TREATMENT

Gum disease is due to an abnormal condition of the sap of a tree. The condition of the sap is in some respects like the blood of animals—it becomes poisoned. When the blood of a person becomes abnormal or poisoned, it often shows itself by breaking out on the skin. When the blood is poisoned it is difficult to heal a wound in the skin, oftentimes blood poison takes place, while a wound in the skin readily heals without any particular attention when the blood is in good condition. The same condition takes place in a tree when the sap becomes sour, thick and poisoned with such elements as excessive magnesia, organic acid and poison emitted from the root. When the sap becomes abnormal or poisoned it often breaks out through the bark, sometimes it comes out through a knot-hole, or the crossing of a root or limb, or more generally brought out by some mechanical cause, such as hitting the bark with a cultivator, hoe, weed-cutter, etc. When some mechanical abrasion is made the sour and poisoned sap comes out and decays the bark and in a short time the gum disease starts I have seen it start in four days after the bark was knocked off below the surface of the ground with a hoe. From this it is carried over the tree, the same as a sore or blood poison spreads over the body and in time proves fatal to life if the blood is not purified; and so if the sap is not sweetened and purified it will prove fatal to the life of a tree.

It matters not how much treatment may be made on the bark to cure this disease, a permanent cure cannot be made without treating the cause, which means to sweeten and purify the sap, and the only way to do this is to sweeten and purify the soil, the source from which the tree obtains its sap. When the sap becomes sour and thick or gummy it cannot circulate to all parts of the tree freely and breaks out through some weak place on the bark. Sometimes gum pockets will first form under the inner bark, and the disease begins to spread over the tree. We frequently find many limbs dying because of a lack of this free transportation or circulation of the sap in a good normal condition. When the starch in the sap is not converted into sugar by the use of sufficient soluble or available lime in the soil, it clogs the circulation and forces out this abnormal or sour sap through the bark.

This lack of free circulation to the extremity of every limb is evidently the principal cause, if not the only cause, of the limbs dying. We also find the bark of the root rotting because of this sour and poisoned condition of the soil. All forms of gum disease evidently originate from the same cause.

THE CURE

Perhaps the cure of gum disease is the thing that more vitally concerns the grower than the cause. However, it is important that we know the cause of this troublesome disease, that we may know how to treat it. It is well known that the sap cannot become sour and poisoned unless there is acidity in the soil. It is also well known that there is only one element that will successfully overcome acidity and poisons of the soil, and that is the simple element of lime in its different forms. Carbonate of lime, which can be bought in the form of quicklime and air-slaked lime (is quicklime slacked) is the form of lime that successfully neutralizes organic acid and the acid or poison emitted from the root (di-hydroxy-stearic acid). This form of lime brings about an alkaline or sweet condition of the soil. The sulphate of lime, called gypsum, is the only form of lime that will successfully neutralize and overcome the excessive magnesia in the soil. This form of lime being soluble in water, also is taken up as a plant food very readily, thus filling the sap of a tree with the proper amount of lime, which is essential as the lime in a healthy tree is about one-half of all its solids. The sulphate of lime is, however, converted into the carbonate in the soil and is taken up by the tree in this form. In treating a gum-diseased tree the first thing to do is to use about 150 pounds of the carbonate of lime and about 150 to 200 pounds of gypsum and work it into the soil under and around the tree. It would be well to take about 50 pounds of the carbonate in the form of quicklime and water-slake it and apply it under and around the tree while warm, with plenty of water; better just at the time of irrigating, and basin the tree to take it down to the roots. About 400 to 500 pounds of stable manure should be applied with the lime to supply the necessary humus, especially in light soils. To hasten the cure the next thing that should be done is to take out about one-eighth of an inch of the bark half an inch apart around the trunk and limbs of a tree where it is affected, and wherever a gum pocket is found, it should be cut out and scraped. Be sure and find all these gum pockets. They are usually under the inner bark. After this, thoroughly witewash the trunk and main limbs of the tree, and watch the tree for a few weeks or longer and wherever the gum appears or seeps out of the slits, remove it and do this until the gum ceases to appear. A tree that is badly affected cannot be cured thoroughly inside of a year or two, and if it is affected all over, it is possible that nothing can cure it. It takes time to sweeten the soil and to thoroughly remove the sour sap and stiff gum from a tree, and also the poisons that have thoroughly saturated the entire wood of the tree. If the above treatment will not cure a tree of this disease, it has gone to such an extent that nothing will cure it, but I would not hasten to cut the tree down; give it a trial with this treatment. Many efforts have been made and theories advanced regarding the cause and treatment of gum disease, but nothing will succeed without removing the cause. The theory has been advanced that it is caused by the crossing of a root or limb, and yet many roots and limbs are crossed that are never gummed. This is simply a mechanical cause that brings out the abnormal sap. Some have removed the dirt from the crown roots and cut away the crossed roots and have obtained good results for a time at least and perhaps for a few years, but the removal of the soil and exposing it and the roots to the air and sun purified it, which did the work, but this will not be permanent, and I strongly advise the lime treatment for a permanent cure. The soil must be thoroughly mixed with the lime at least three feet deep so as to come in contact with all the acidity and poison. This should not only be done with the trees affected with gum disease, but it should be done with every part of an orchard to prevent the disease from coming. It is easier to prevent the disease than to cure it. The weaker or more sensitive trees are, like human beings, more susceptible to diseases, and thus are affected first, but the same cause is present in the soil and will eventually effect most every tree, as is the case in very old orchards in Southern California.

To mix the soil thoroughly for the first three feet at least six or seven tons of the different forms of lime should be applied to the acre for two or three years, then cut the amount down gradually until about one and a fourth tons are used annually.

"An ounce of preventive is worth a pound of cure."

Lesson V.—First Quarter, For Feb. 4, 1912.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. ii, 1-12. Memory Verses, 1, 2—Golden Text, Isa. xlv, 22—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Although it is but a few weeks since we had this portion as a Christmas Lesson, we come to it again with great desire to know more intimately Him of whom it speaks, Jesus, King of the Jews, that we may worship Him as He says we should and as the Father desires, "in spirit and in truth" (John iv, 23, 24; v, 23). Remember His own words in the wilderness, "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve" (chapter iv, 10); also the words of the heavenly messenger to John in Patmos when he fell down to worship at his feet, "See thou do it not; * * * worship God" (Rev. xix, 10; xxii, 9). Mere mouth and lip worship He hates and all that is taught by commandments of men (chapter xv, 7-9; Isa. i, 13, 14; xxix, 13). It is the heart that He has regard to. He searcheth the heart and tries the reins and desires truth in the inward parts (I Sam. xvi, 7; Jer. xvii, 10).

In these days the Lord Jesus Christ is very little spoken of or thought of as King of the Jews, and the church as a whole has no use for Israel, sees no future for Israel as a nation and does not want to hear of the return of Christ, seemingly having no place in her faith for the words of the prophet who predicted His birth at Bethlehem and spoke of Him as "a governor that shall rule my people Israel" (Isaiah verse 6; Mic. v, 2). Nathaniel spoke of Him as "the Son of God, the King of Israel," and Zephaniah in prophetic vision saw Him as "the King of Israel, even Jehovah, in the midst of Jerusalem" (John i, 40; Zeph. iii, 14, 15). Oh, for such vision now and the zeal and devotion of these wise men from the east! The same city, Jerusalem, to which they came seeking Him in order to worship Him shall yet be His throne, and all the nations shall be gathered unto it to the name of the Lord, to Jerusalem (Jer. iii, 17). Then shall the Lord stain the pride of all glory and bring into contempt all the honorable of the earth. He shall smite many nations as their kings shall see and consider that which they had not heard, and thereafter they will be glad to bring their wealth to Israel and show forth the praises of the Lord (Isa. xxiii, 9; Jer. li, 15, R. V., margin; ix, 5, 6). Then shall all such as Herod have come cause to be troubled, for all kings and mighty men as well as people in ordinary life shall call to mountains and rocks to fall on them and hide them from the face of Him on the throne and from the wrath of the Lamb (Rev. vi, 15-17). It is in reference to that time that we have the exhortation, "Be wise now, therefore, O ye kings; * * * kiss the Son lest * * * ye perish" (Ps. ii, 10-12). What a long conflict it has been since it started in Eden; how much the saints have suffered and still suffer, and children, too, because of the hatred of the great adversary, the murderer, the father of lies, the devil. Who would not pray that the kingdom of peace and righteousness might come and the adversary be banished from the air and the earth? Can we wonder that the great King has said that He will not rest until it come to pass and that we are not to rest nor give Him rest until it come (Isa. xxiii, 1, 17; Jer. li, 17). If all believers were right with God, seeking first His kingdom, worshipping Him with their treasures as these wise men did, would there not be an abundance of men and money to carry the gospel everywhere? The vast majority of so-called believers seem to be asleep, utterly indifferent to the worldwide opportunities. Neither the gospel nor He of whom it tells can fail (Isa. xlii, 4; lv, 11). The church will be completed, but who can tell how much we may be hindering? It is high time to awake, to arise from the dead things and people all about us and become Spirit filled to buy up the opportunities. Like aged Simeon, these men recognized the young child as the king whom they had come to worship. What a contrast between them and the man who sold the Lord Jesus Christ to His enemies for thirty pieces of silver! What is your estimate of Him? Is a bit of this world's pleasure or treasure more to you than He is, or is He to you the altogether lovely one? Do you spend little on yourself compared with what you give to Him? How far would you gladly journey to make Him known to others? At least twelve times in this gospel it is written "that it might be fulfilled" or "then was fulfilled" (i, 22; ii, 15, 17, 22; iv, 14; viii, 17; xii, 17; xiii, 35; xli, 4; xxvi, 56; xlvii, 9, 35), reminding us of His own words after His resurrection, "All things must be fulfilled which were written * * * concerning Me" (Luke xxiv, 44). I believe that our devotion to Him will be in proportion to our confidence in Him as the fulfiller and the fulfillment of all Scripture. If He is to us not only our Saviour from the wrath to come and our deliverer from the power of present sin, but also a real King, King of kings and Lord of lords, as well as King of Israel, assuring us that we may sit with Him in His throne and reign with Him over the earth (Rev. iii, 21; v, 9, 10), how can we help being so inspired by the kingdom and the glory to which He has called us as to be blind and deaf to all but Himself? Thus it was with Paul and Peter and John, with Abraham and Moses and others.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 4, 1912.

Topic.—Christian Endeavor Ideals.—John xv, 1-8. (Christian Endeavor day.) Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The thirty-first anniversary of the Christian Endeavor movement may well be kept by the consideration of Christian Endeavor Ideals. For nearly a third of a century Christian Endeavor has existed, and the one prominent characteristic of the ideals of the organization is their permanency. It is not too much to say that the spirit of Christian Endeavor is exactly the same today as it was upon that night thirty-one years ago when it first came into being under the guiding and inspiring of its still great and honored leader, the Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark. There have been many varieties of expression of Christian Endeavor activity in the years that have seen its worldwide and wonderful growth. Without such variety in forms of expression stagnation and death would have resulted. Yet amid all the changing scenes of the years the underlying principles and the youth inspiring ideals have ever remained the same, and they still exist and still inspire to deep devotion and consecrated Christian service.

The glorification and exaltation of Christ have ever been a Christian Endeavor ideal. This is vital and fundamental and absolutely necessary to the permanency of any Christian organization. To bring the young into vital union with Christ and through this vital union to Him to service in the church of Christ was the supreme purpose of the first Christian Endeavor society, and no society today is worthy of the name unless it has the very same purposes in view. To accomplish this dual purpose Christ had to be exalted, and He was. Pledged service was conditioned upon personal trust in Christ. Supreme importance was attached to complete obedience to Christ. Church loyalty was emphasized upon its only true basis—the relation of the church to Christ. Moreover, this supreme ideal was summed up in the society's motto, "For Christ and the church." Little wonder that such an ideal intelligently and attractively presented has fired the zeal of millions of young people the world over.

The supreme exaltation of Christ and His church could not but develop another Christian Endeavor ideal—namely, worldwide Christian fellowship, leading to unity in spirit and co-operation in service. In Christ there is neither nationality nor denomination. Each branch is in vital connection with the vine, and by this union with the vine each branch is in vital connection with every other branch. Christ being the vine and each Christian a branch bound to Him all must be bound together. Out of this ideal there necessarily grew international and interdenominational fellowship and co-operation in Christian service, two of the most outstanding of all Christian Endeavor characteristics.

Around these ideals of an exalted Christ and a real worldwide Christian unity in Christ all Christian Endeavor activities and achievements have been centered. Such an exaltation of Christ could not but lead to the desire to win souls for Christ, to increased loyalty to the church of Christ and to manifold activities to make the world better and happier for Christ's sake and in the name of Christ. All these Christian Endeavor has done, and the verdict of the passing year can only be that it has been well done. But there should be no satisfaction with past accomplishment. However glorious the past, the future may be even more glorious, and each record of another year's achievement should only be an inspiration to increased attainment. "Thanking God" for the past let us "take courage" and face the future with renewed devotion and increased consecration.

BIBLE READINGS.

Prov. xi, 30; Zech. iv, 6; Matt. v, 16; vii, 12; xxv, 31-46; John xv, 10-14; xvii, 18-23; Rom. xii, 1, 2; I Cor. iii, 9-23; ix, 19-27; Eph. iv, 1-6; Gal. vi, 1-10.

Young Egypt.

In the American mission, Cairo, Egypt, there is a young men's Christian Endeavor society which added twenty-five new names to its roll last year. A membership contest proved that it is possible to win young men. Why should not the young men in our American societies have contests for more young men? It can be done in many places.

These Egyptian Endeavors have a library of 265 books, besides magazines, which they keep in constant and useful circulation. Many of them give away their own papers to acquaintances.

The audiences are at times cosmopolitan. The average attendance during the year is about fifty, including Protestants, Copts, Mohammedans, Jews, Egyptians, Englishmen and Americans.

Christian Endeavor's Influence.

I believe in Christian Endeavor because I have seen it train children into Christian life in a sawmill village that was without any other services until when a pastor came eleven were ready for church membership and five took their parents also to the altar. It changed the lifeless prayer meeting in a prison into a lively band of Christian workers. It brought to those men comfort and strength to bear their condition. I have seen it sustain for years regular services in a rough community without a pastor.—S. M. Sloan.

SESSION MAY LAST TILL FALL

A Truce Will Be Declared During National Conventions.

WILL TRY TO ADJOURN EARLY

Speaker Clark on Washington Architecture—American Humor Tried on an Englishman With Usual Result. Didn't Want Any More Charges Made Against Lorimer.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, Jan. 26.—[Special.]—Before congress did anything and ever since there has been speculation as to the length of the session. It is believed that the session will close before the national conventions meet. If not there will have to be a sort of truce, a gentleman's agreement not to do anything of importance while the conventions are in session. Members of both parties in congress will want to go to the great national meetings. Unless there is a deadlock over some of the proposed measures there is no reason why the routine business cannot be closed up and the session ended before the first convention meets.

Only once in recent presidential years has the session lasted beyond the conventions. Back in 1888 it continued until late in the campaign.

The Speaker Makes a Suggestion.

Speaker Clark has a great hobby for the curious in history and is a constant student of the subject. One day he came across the following quotation of a writer of the period shortly before the civil war:

"Washington is the elysium of oddities, the limbo of absurdities, an imbroglio of ludicrous anomalies."

"He was writing about the architecture of Washington," said the speaker, "but I think he has furnished a fine text for a discourse on present day politics. Now, here is what he has to say further about Washington architecture: 'Planned on a scale of surpassing grandeur, its architectural execution is almost contemptible. It has a monument that will never be finished, a capitol that lacks a dome and a scientific institute which does nothing but report the rise and fall of the thermometer.'"

"I reckon if he were here now he'd revise his schedule on architecture," the speaker commented, "but it would be a Republican revision."

Why a "Bootlegger"?

Director Newell of the reclamation service is proud of the fact that England has sent one of her star men from India to this country to study the methods of the United States government in irrigation engineering. S. A. Bunting, who is at the head of the reclamation service in the East, Indies, has spent several weeks in Washington for the purpose of becoming familiar with American administrative and constructive systems.

Incidentally they say he has been also studying the construction of American jokes. Congressman Kindred of Nebraska, whose state is interested not only in irrigation projects, but also in preventing shipments of liquor in territory where its sale is in violation of law, said to him on being presented:

"If you were an American they would call you a bootlegger."

"Why?"

"Because you are trying to introduce wet goods in dry territory."

"But," said Mr. Bunting when the colloquial terms were explained to him, "my boots do not extend above my legs. Why call me a bootlegger?"

The Kind of "Scratchers."

An enterprising firm that sells "back scratchers" sent a sample of its wares to President Taft for Christmas with the message, "When election time comes remember that Michigan is at your back."

Representative Randall of Texas, who heard of the unique gift, said:

"What the president needs at election time is not a good back scratcher, but intelligent ballot scratchers."

Was Lorimer's Friend.

An Illinois man entered the senate document room recently and asked George Boyd, the veteran superintendent, for a certain government publication of which there was but a small edition.

"Where are you from?" asked Mr. Boyd.

"Illinois."

"To whom shall I charge this document?" for they must be taken from the quota of some senator.

"Well, I know Senator Lorimer pretty well."

"All right," said the superintendent; "I will charge it to Senator Lorimer."

"Say, don't do that," said the Illinois man. "I'm a friend of his, and he has charges enough against him now."

His Lunching Time.

Senator Clark of Wyoming spent some time abroad last year and while in Paris came across a homesick Wyoming lad who was living in the Latin quarter and studying art.

"I was a little homesick myself," said the senator, "and readily understood my young friend's delight in meeting one of his home folks. So I asked him to take lunch with me, and he accepted. As I had not mentioned the hour I asked him what was his regular time for lunching."

"Sunday," he answered.

Contracts which permit the fruit packers to weigh but hold the producer to the letter were denounced in a set of resolutions passed by the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union at its county convention in San Jose. SOLONS EXCITED CONCERNING ART

With Them the Term Covers a Multitude of Sins.

ART COMMISSION PROPOSED.

Roosevelt Named Such a Body, but Congress Refused to Appropriately For It—Memorials to Braddock Coming and Going—Nicholas Longworth Also Distinguished as a Violin Player.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, Jan. 25.—[Special.]—From time to time there arises in both the senate and house a question of art. The term includes everything from landscape gardening about the capitol and parks to pictures in the capitol and National museum. What the average congressman does not know about art would fill several books, but that does not prevent him from discussing the subject when it arises.

The two committees on library constitute the censors of art for the government. Of course there is not much connection between the library and art, as we now understand it, but for some reason it has been considered that persons qualified to pass upon library matters must be of an artistic temperament and consequently all questions about pictures, sculpture, monuments, etc., are referred to them.

Art Commission Wanted.

Now, these committees are dignified, important socially and small as to numbers, and places upon them are very desirable. It may be questioned whether the men most fitted for art judges are selected, and that may account for the demand that is frequently made for an art commission which shall pass upon everything from a park to a picture, including the public buildings and their contents.

So far the advocates of a commission have not been able to make much headway. Roosevelt appointed one, but congress made it impossible by preventing the expenditure of any money to maintain it. Meanwhile some very queer things in the way of art have been acquired by the government. Political pull often gets the better of artistic taste in these matters.

Would Divide Honors.

One of the patriotic chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which takes pride in achieving results as well as in securing social distinction, has had in mind for a long time a proposal to mark the march of General Braddock from Alexandria, Va., to Fort Duquesne, Pa., with monuments. Not long ago these women heard that the war department proposed to do about the same thing. Unwilling to have their cherished design appropriated by the government, they sought General Bixby, chief of engineers, who had the project in charge, and said they hoped there would be no interference with their plans.

After giving the matter consideration General Bixby suggested with a twinkle in his eye: "Suppose we share the honors in this way: We will trace Braddock's route to Fort Duquesne, and your society can trace him back."

Classified the Bug.

Dr. Charles E. Bessey, president of the American Association For the Advancement of Science, was once teaching in Ames college, Iowa, and his visit to Washington recalled a story of the old days. A number of students presented him with a collection of rare species of bugs to classify. Among them was one rather cleverly made up of a number of bugs pasted together. Dr. Bessey gave all the others their proper names and when he came to the manufactured article said:

"And this, gentlemen, is an example of your own kind—a humbug."

A Musical Pair.

Nicholas Longworth was some fellow before he became the son-in-law of President Roosevelt, although that gave him the most of his fame throughout the country. Nick for several years during his bachelor days was a favorite in small gatherings where songs and musical stunts were featured. He is known for real artistic work in playing the violin and was once a pupil of the famous teacher Ysaye. Quite frequently Longworth and Congressman Bartholdt of St. Louis do a turn. Longworth playing the violin and Bartholdt the piano. If Bartholdt had not been a congressman he might have been quite a famous musician, though he graduated from a reporter into politics.

Invited to See Angel May.

Senator Works of California is a lover of fine horses, and one of his regrets is that he cannot ride a horse in Washington. Not that he finds it impossible to get a horse, but simply that he does not care to ride a horse that he does not own and know well.

The proprietor of a well equipped stable in the capital, who, knowing the senator's love for riding, had been urging him to try out one of his best animals, called up his office one day. Secretary Dickinson answered the phone and was asked to deliver this message: "Won't you come down and see Angel May?" giving an address.

"I think you must have the wrong number," said Dickinson. "This is Senator Works' office."

"Just deliver my message, will you?" was the answer. "Angel May is a horse, not one of the pony ballet."

The rule that superior court judges are to follow each other in rotation for the court's presiding judge should be suspended in the case of Judge Frank R. Willis. The rule that would take Frank from the place he is so well fitted for by both temper and experience, and which he so worthily fills, is by no means imperative, and its disregard would be far less harmful than its observance in this case.

We refuse to believe that Clarence Darrow had any hand in the attempted bribery of jurors in the McNamara case. Whatever of scoundrelism the detective agencies of the McNamara defense may be guilty of it is inconceivable that Darrow had a hand in it.

The time for lining up for a presidential candidate is at hand. Thanks to the last session of the legislature an opportunity for the formal public expression of a preference will be afforded on Tuesday, May 14, at which time the presidential preference primary will be held. Singularly enough the only name on the list of presidential possibilities that is not that of a candidate is the name of Theodore Roosevelt.

Blanket franchises covering the use of county roads for the laying of gas mains may be granted at any time after the new state liabilities law goes into effect March 24 as well as now, according to John M. Eshleman, president of the State Railroad commission, who is in Los Angeles attending the Imperial valley rate hearing. The new law will not affect such franchises he said. The Huntington interests, which are seeking a blanket franchise for the Midway Gas company, have represented to the board of supervisors that the franchise would have to be granted before March 24 or the supervisors would be powerless to act. These "blanket franchises" are for the gas mains from the Midway district surveyors are locating through the county from the north.

Andrew Carniega is accounted a rich man. How did he come by his riches? Does any body know? Does he know? Whoever does know would confer a favor to kindly explain. He seems to be in a sweat to get rid of some of it—more for the glory of giving than for simply doing good. But riches are riches however obtained, and the doing of evil to get them is atoned for in the eyes of most people if ultimately put to good use.

Many of our old time politicians deplore the passing of the convention system of nominating candidates for office, for the reason chiefly that with it has gone their occupation as political bosses. Popular favor has been substituted for the purchasing power of the money of "big business" and made effective through the primary system of nominations. It is much easier for some to buy a nomination from a political boss with money or pledges of service than to get it from the people as a reward of merit.

BROUGHT BACK ON AN OLD CHARGE

While S. C. Dorway was S. P. railway agent at Burbank some three years ago, he suddenly disappeared. Shortly after a warrant for his arrest on the charge of embezzling the funds of the company in the sum of $303.11 was issued by Judge George C. Melrose, Justice of the Peace of Burbank Township. But the warrant, not served, was brought back and filed with non est return.

A few weeks ago an alias warrant was issued in the same case. The fugitive had been discovered in the state prison of Texas, at Huntsville, where he was completing a term of two years for the embezzlement of $1000.00 from the S. P. Co., in a Texas town.

A few days ago as he was leaving the Texas prison he was taken into custody on extradition papers, and on Saturday last was brought to Tropico for arraignment before Justice Melrose on the Burbank episode.

The prisoner was represented by Colonel Johnson of Los Angeles. The state's attorney was absent and the case was continued until Saturday, Feb. 3.

JOINT CONTROL AND OPERATION OF WATER SYSTEM PROPOSED FOR TROPICO AND GLENDALE

No citizen of these cities at all acquainted with the conditions of water supply and service existing alike in the cities of Tropico and Glendale but must be impressed with the importance of prompt and vigorous action on the part of the authorities of the two cities for their correction.

That the first step in that direction must be to take back the local supervision and control of such service is a self-evident proposition. The abuse of their power by a man or men in Los Angeles in whose hands such supervision and control now are, is most intolerable; an abuse that is self-respecting communities like Tropico and Glendale will not submit to, particularly where the law affords an ample remedy as in this case, to-wit: Act 2362 of the General Laws, being "An act to authorize cities to acquire and operate a joint system or systems of water supply."

This act is commended to the favorable consideration of the board of trustees of the two cities. Its provisions are plain and simple, and readily adapted to the needs of each.

The machinery of joint action is put in motion through a commission of three members from each city.

SOCIETY

A number of Tropico mother's have entered their babies in the Borden contest. We should be able to capture a few of the prizes as their are beautiful children here.

The Tropico Chapter of the P. E. O. met at the residence of Mrs. Joseph Webster of Central avenue for the purpose of electing officers and other-wise perfecting its plans.

Dainty and replete in all of its appointments was the charming luncheon, with which Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Moser, entertained at their home on Tenth street, Friday, complimentary to Mr. M. O. Ayres of Dakota City, Nebraska, who is passing the winter in Tropico as the guest of his brother, S. A. Ayres, and sister, Mrs. N. C. Burch. Seated with Mr. and Mrs. Moser, and the guest of honor, were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Ayres and Mrs. J. D. Botts.

Miss Cora Hickman entertained as week-end guests, at her home, Palm Villa, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Proctor Neil of Ashland, Oregon. Mr. Neil who is mayor of the city of Ashland, is a wealthy land and cattle owner. Mrs. Neil and Miss Hickman were schoolmates back in the old home town, in Indiana.

Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Kincaid, of Los Angeles, were the over Sunday guests of Mr. Kincaid's sister, Mrs. J. E. Shuey of Columbus street.

Mrs. Frank Hopkins who has been passing several weeks as the guest of Miss Zetta and Miss Bertha Hopkins returned to her home at Valley Center, San Diego County, the first of the week.

Mrs. J. D. Botts, a former resident of Tropico, was the week-end guest of numerous friends here.

Mrs. William Malcom of Ramona Acres, was the mid-week guest of her daughter, Mrs. John Lee Kirkham.

PRINT OF HIS FACE

By Elmer Allen Bess

Be the side of the road, where the Master
Was hearing the cross of his shame,
Stood the beautiful Veronica
With sensitive nature aflame;
She was watching the dust-covered figure
As toiling and weary, alone
He was bearing the burdens of many,
And teaching the way to a throne.
As he walked with the men of a march,
Despite all the shame of the day,
She was conscious his spirit was striving
To master the pain of the way;
To wipe with her kerchief his face,
And received as reward for her effort,
The image of Christ on the lace.
And more true than the legends of ancient,
Miraculous prints of his face
Will abide in the faith of the ages,
For those who are seeking his grace;
And for thee, O thou sensitive nature,
Aflame with a love for the best,
On thy heart will be printed Christ's image,
The way of the cross will be blessed,

The following information on the subject of electric lighting is reproduced from the Sentinel of last week.

ELECTRIC LIGHTS FOR TROPICO

Last Thursday evening Mr. Herman Paine, the new manager of the Basket factory, located in this city, appeared before our Board of City Trustees and asked permission to submit a bid on the supplying of electrical power, to be used in connection with a distributing system to be owned and operated by the City of Tropico, to light our streets and residences.

The factory makes its baskets and boxes from wood, and Mr. Paine says that he will have enough waste material, which if used for fuel under boilers would generate enough power to supply his factory with electric power, and also light Tropico streets and residences.

At present it is necessary to keep two or three men busy to burn this waste material. Mr. Paine believes that he can turn this waste into dollars the same as they do in their northern plant, and at the same time give Tropico power at a very low figure.

In Los Angeles the price of electrical power is fixed by a city public utility commission, and the prices they fixed for the City of Los Angeles for the year ending July 1st, 1912, are as follows, and the amounts are for a period of one month.

LOS ANGELES BLOCK POWER RATE 1911-1912

First 100 K. W. H. @ 7c.....	$ 7.00
Next 200 K. W. H. @ 6c.....	12.00
Next 200 K. W. H. @ 5c.....	10.00
Next 500 K. W. H. @ 4c.....	20.00
Next 500 K. W. H. @ 3c.....	15.00

Next 500 K. W. H. @ 2½c.....	12.50
Next 1000 K. W. H. @ 2c.....	20.00
Next 1000 K. W. H. @ 1½c.....	15.00

First 4000 K. W. H. Total.....$111.50

All over 4000 K. W. H. @ 1.4c.

*K. W. H. equals kilo watt hour, which is equal to one sixteen candle power lamp, the size usually used in residence, burning sixteen hours or sixteen lamps to burn one hour.

In order to show how the above table would work we will take an example:

Suppose Tropico had three hundred subscribers, using 20 K. W. H. each per month on an average, this would equal 20x300 or 6000 K. W. H.; and 160 street lights, averaging 4800 K. W. H. per month, the total would be 10800 K. W. H. per month. The first 4000 K. W. H. would cost from table $111.50, and the next 6800 K. W. H. would cost @ 1.4c $95.20, or a total for the whole of $206.70 per month, or an average of 1.9c per K. W. H., and the more subscribers we have the cheaper will be the average price per K. W. H.

If we had 500 subscribers, the price would be about 1¾c per K. W. H.

To further illustrate how the Los Angeles official rate for residences, seven and one-half cents per K. W. H. would result to the individual consumer, we offer the following:

If you use two sixteen candle power lights five hours per night for thirty nights you would use about twenty kilo watt hours per month, and twenty K. W. H. at seven and one-half cents per K. W. H. would cost you one and one-half dollars per month.

The rate charged in Tropico now is 15c per K. W. H., or twice that charged in Los Angeles.
